EXAMPLE

What we've learned about you

You retired 2-5 years ago after a distinguished career as a CEO and General Manager. Over your professional life, you've developed skills in business development, people leadership across diverse geographies and cultures, financial management, and new product development.

You are open to opportunities in either similar areas to your previous work or exploring something new. You've expressed interest in land and environmental projects, volunteering to assist people, and sustainable agriculture. Your background in pharmacology and extensive experience in animal nutrition are assets you'd like to continue leveraging if possible.

While earning money is not a priority, you would prefer roles that offer some remuneration. You enjoy roles with some physical activity and a manageable degree of pressure. You enjoy interacting with others and mentoring or coaching. You describe yourself as collaborative, excelling in team environments and building relationships.

You are open to limited training (less than 8 weeks) if required for the right opportunity. While you're unsure about starting your own business, it's something you might consider with the right supports.

You're particularly interested in areas involving animals or the natural environment, sports, tourism, and coaching/teaching. You prefer in-person opportunities within a 30-minute commute from home and can commit 15-30 hours per week.

What we recommend for you

Based on your skills, interests, and preferences, we recommend exploring the following areas:

- Environmental or Animal Welfare Volunteering: Engage with organizations focused on land conservation, environmental restoration or animal welfare to support meaningful community projects.
- Tourism or Outdoor Activities Leadership: Combine your interest in tourism and the environment by leading eco-tourism initiatives or outdoor activities that educate participants about sustainability.
- Sustainable Agriculture Projects: Leverage your expertise to contribute to initiatives focused on sustainable farming practices or land rehabilitation.
- Mentoring or Coaching Roles: Use your leadership experience to mentor individuals or teams in areas like business development or new product strategy.

Opportunities you can consider

The following opportunities are open for you to inquire about:

- Become a mentor for Start-ups at Stone & Chalk: Provide mentorship to start-up founders on business strategy. In particular, ask to work with start-ups in the agriculture space.
- Become a Bushcare Volunteer: Assist with land conservation projects such as tree planting, erosion control, and habitat restoration.
- WIRES (NSW Wildlife Information Rescue & Education Service) Wildlife Rescuer. Requires completion of WIRES' online training program (can be completed in under 8 weeks).
- Inquire about Sustainable Agriculture Facilitators (SAFs): SAFs connect farmers, landholders, community groups and agriculture industries to relevant information and programs on climate-smart, sustainable agriculture practices. These are likely full time positions, but we encourage you to contact SAFs currently working in NSW to see if there are opportunities for you to contribute on a casual basis.
